PEABODY AND VANCE AVENUE CITIZENS JOIN IN IMPORTANT FOOD QUESTION

Prominent Women Aver None EVERY MEAL NOW So Miserable as Those Who Dare Not Taste of Well-Cooked Meals.

Can you imagine anything worse than not being able to eat heartily of a well-cooked meal, perfectly seasoned; for instance, roast chicken and dressing, stoak, sausage, vegetables, salads

A person may have lost an arm, a limb, an eye or be as deaf as a post, or have any one of a hundred other afflictions, and yet they are able to satisfy the craving of their appetite.

According to Mrs. D. M. Haste, 905 Vance avenue, and Miss Julia Schwart, 988 Peabody avenue, Memphis, there are none so miserable as those who have nervous dyspepsia. The high cost of living is undoubtedly a big factor in the food problem, but an ailment of the stomach that robs folks of their appetites is an equally vital question because sooner or later this condition results in breaking down every tissue in the human body.

These are not the words of Mrs. Haste and Miss Schwart, but they are thoughts developed in the course of a conversation with them, in which they told of the almost marvelous restorative powers of Pepgen, which is a new compound now being introduced here by the Weiss Pharmacy and other leading druggists. The experience of Mrs. Haste and Miss Schwart appear in another column on this page.

NOT A SECRET REMEDY. Pepgen tonic is not a secret remedy. The formula is printed on the back of every package. It contains only remedies of approved and recognized merit. All of the ingredients are carefully selected and scientifically compounded by the special Pepgen Process in which neither sugar nor alcohol is used. Persons with kidney ills should carefully avoid sugar, as should also people with weak stomachs. Sugar often produces what is called saccharine fer-ment. Alcohol is very bad for people who are subject to rheumatism and even the slightest amount of this stimuwho are subject to rheumatism and lant sometimes produces an attack.

In Pepgen will be found peppermint leaves, used to stop nausea, relieve spasmodic pains in the stomach and bowels and expel gas. Gentian root cossesses tonic properties in a high degree. It aids and invigorates digestion. Peruvian bark, an antimalarial agent from which quinine is made, is of service in debility and wasting diseases. Pallor, impoverished blood and feeble recuperative powers are often relieved by its use. Fringe tree bark exerts a special influence upon the liver. It is of benefit where there is yellowness of the skin and eyes and a sense of uneasiness in the right side. Black cohosh, through its influence upon the muscular system, is recommended for rheumatism, neuralgia and lumbago. Plantain leaves contain properties valuable in kldney and bladder derange-do not eat a great deal are hearty and healthy, while others who fairly gorge themselves are thin and scrawny. These latter people do not digest what they eat. Their food is not changed they eat. Their food is not changed by digestive juices into the form that they can assimilate. Their food simply stays in the stomach for a while and is removed as waste matter.

Peppen, the vegetable food and tonic delicately adapted to stomach needs, stimulates the digestive and assimilative organs so that food is digested, assimilated, used, absorbed as strength and vitality into the system. Peppen is a reasonable way of building health because it makes food into blood, muscle and hone. It has a pleasant sansafras flavor.

Discussing the work of his committee, Mr. Williamson stated that J. E. "Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 cunce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

such they were, faded, and the thunder of applause which followed equaled any ever given an artist by a Memphis audience.

It was in her final group, however, that Alda's real 'triumph came. The victory of Aurora over the pall of night in tonal exuitation re-schoed to the dome of the theater in Leoni's 'Birth of Morn,' and the singer's wonderful range and dramatic potentialities of her voice in the lower register were exhibited in 'The Star,' by Rogers. Her whole pent-up soul, however, poured itself out in 'The Singer.' a striking composition written by Maxwell and dedicated to Mme. Alda herself. Hereasy accomplishment of the wide range this composition requires again swept away reserve and the number had to be repeated.

With an infectious humor none but a Southern girl could interpret, Miss Erin Ballard, accompanist, a Tupele, Miss., product, galned a ripple of applause with the first notes of a darky song by Guion, then humorously and feelingly rendered by Mme. Alda. Smiles were turned into tear when the golden voice of the diva cried out a single verse of 'Old Folks at Home' and the duet from 'La Boheme,' which closed the recital, capped the climax and the the-recital, capped the climax and the the-recital, capped the climax and the the-recital, capped the climax and the heretant of more him plaudits earlier in the program than his companion. His voice is not a robust one and does not compare in timbre and volume with that of Althouse, heard last week in Memphis. In flexibility, however, in resonance and easy transition from bell-like notes, which suggest McCormack, to essays at more heroic passages, Mr. Hackett excelled. His masterful control of his voice in the florid measures of Puccini, with flute-like strains which at times ruggested Fra Diavolo, carried away the hearts of his auditors. The more somber minors of Grieg were given an equally sympathetic reading. As an encore to his second group, Mr. Hackett and Mme. Alda.
